Plugins & Effects Resources: The invention relates to a method and a device for the pressure control of a liquid system in which a heater/cooler device is arranged in a line and in which the temperature is adjusted by adjusting the circulation quantity of a liquid. In heating systems in which water or other fluids are circulated for heating purposes in a heat exchanger, for example in cooling and heating installations, a problem in adjustment of the temperature of the system is encountered. A temperature error in the system should be corrected without causing scalding and without heat discharge into the environment. It is known to control the temperature of the system by adjusting the temperature of a heat exchange fluid, usually water, by adjusting the circulation quantity of the fluid in a heat exchanger. The simplest type of adjusting arrangement is known for example from DE 25 19 872 A1. A recirculating pump that pumps the fluid through the heat exchanger has a pump with a cylindrical chamber in which the fluid is pumped. In the rear part of the chamber is an opening through which the fluid can pass radially. The fluid emerging from the opening is fed to a discharge nozzle which discharges the fluid onto a heating surface. This heating surface is arranged inside a special pipe and is maintained at a preset temperature. In this arrangement the discharge nozzle and the heating surface form the flow-controlled and temperature-controlled heat exchanger of the invention. The temperature of the fluid is controlled by adjusting the discharge nozzle. A lower or higher flow is adjusted by using a throttle device. The throttle is situated in the rear part of the cylindrical chamber of the pump, which is formed by a pump casing that is capable of rotating about a centrally arranged axis. Fluid can only flow in when the pump is rotated. The rotation of the pump is usually done manually. The danger of scalding and heat leakage exists if the heating surface has a great heating surface. It is very difficult to control the temperature of a heating surface with a surface area of a few square meters. The safety aspect of a throttling arrangement presents the same problem. A device of this type is suitable for a large heating surface area, but is unsuitable for a small heating surface area. It is also known to use a thermostatic control device. This can be done in an arrangement in which a

Cognitive Functions in Children Born to Maternal Bisphenol A Exposure. The aim of this study was to examine the hypothesis that impaired cognitive functions in children born to mothers with high serum bisphenol A (BPA) levels would be associated with elevated serum BPA levels in the children, as well as lifestyle behaviors of the mother during pregnancy. A total of 133 Japanese mothers were enrolled in this study. Serum BPA levels were measured in maternal blood samples collected at first trimester, early second trimester, and late second trimester, and in cord blood samples collected at the delivery of the children. The child's cognitive function was assessed using the Japanese version of the Wechsler Intelligence Scale for Children at ages 7, 11, and 14. A linear regression model was used to determine the
